Q: Game loop in Java I was looking at Tim Lim's code for graphics in Java, and noticed he used a single thread for the entire game loop. Since Java can only run one thread, what happens when another thread needs to access the frame buffer? Is it not thread safe? A: Yes, that is correct. But it's also a rather misleading example. Why was he using a single thread? Because, using double buffering, it's easy to get a frame at a time and avoid polling. And why would he do that? Because Java doesn't support any multi-threading that works on the graphics level.

Q: How many miles I can run, with 4 gas tanks? I have four gas tanks and can run for a specific duration. How many miles can I travel with them? Example: My car has 4 gas tanks: 1 first, 1 medium and 2 last. I need to go 1000 miles. Is it possible? A: Since this is not a complete solution, but instead just a good spot to start with, I think it is fair to make this a community wiki. Note that it is not entirely clear whether you mean that you have a single gas tank, or four different ones. A: You can't. Gas tanks are meant to be filled, and to be emptied. However, I will mention that the maximum range of the Battery-electric cars is 15 miles in the United States. If you switch the battery to run mode, you can drive 100 miles per hour for a brief while. A: It depends on your car. If your car
