1.0 OBJECTIVES

In this unit, we shall give you a general introduction to varieties of prose as well as to different prose forms. If you read this unit carefully, you should be able to:

- distinguish between prose and poetry;
- define descriptive, narrative and expository prose;
- describe fictional prose forms such as the short story and novel and non-fictional prose such as the essay, letter, travelogue, biography and autobiography, diary and speeches.
- recognise various figures of speech.

1.1 INTRODUCTION

As you know, the present course is divided into two parts. The first deals with varieties of prose while the second concentrates on different prose forms. This unit aims to provide a general introduction to the varieties and forms of prose. We shall discuss descriptive prose at some length in the next three units in this block. A detailed study of each variety and form of prose will be provided in subsequent blocks. In short, the first unit of this block gives a general introduction to the whole course. Units 2-4 deal specifically with descriptive prose.

In this unit, we shall first examine the difference between prose and poetry.
